

Country Briefing - The Republic of China

Political Briefing

Introduction

Since 1949 the Republic of China (ROC) also known as Taiwan has been in a constant struggle against the People's Republic of China (PRC). Our population, GDP, and military capabilities are now far behind that of a resurgent PRC and only 12 minor UN members recognize us instead of the PRC. Officially we do not claim to be an independent country, rather a continuation of the ROC, claiming the whole Chinese mainland. Unofficially however we have long seen the writing on the wall and have formed a unique Taiwanese identity.

The US-Taiwanese relationship is based on the Taiwan Relations Act (TRA). The treaty allows the U.S to supply arms to Taiwan and was our major source for non-indigenous defense equipment. It is important to note that while there was no mandatory guarantee made by the U.S to defend Taiwan under the TRA, they (and a great many others) chose to come to our aid anyway.

Despite the establishment of more favorable relations after the end of the Cold War with Jiang Zemin and Hu Jintao, Xi Jinping had been aggressively arguing for the return of Taiwan to the PRC. We had long suffered daily intrusions into our air defense identification zone and coercive economic and diplomacy offensives from across the strait. Beijing has used its military to attack us and occupy part of our Nation. We now sit in the dragon's mouth, and it's jaws are slowly closing.

Strategic Objectives

There has been and will only ever be one goal: Taiwan is to remain a free and independent nation. We will continue take all necessary measures to secure Taiwan and its people from Beijing and resist the enemies. China cannot be allowed to dictate the politics of our country.

Country Briefing - The Republic of China

Political Briefing

Introduction

Since 1949 the Republic of China (ROC) also known as Taiwan has been in a constant struggle against the People's Republic of China (PRC). Our population, GDP, and military capabilities are now far behind that of a resurgent PRC and only 12 minor UN members recognize us instead of the PRC. Officially we do not claim to be an independent country, rather a continuation of the ROC, claiming the whole Chinese mainland. Unofficially however we have long seen the writing on the wall and have formed a unique Taiwanese identity.

The US-Taiwanese relationship is based on the Taiwan Relations Act (TRA). The treaty allows the U.S to supply arms to Taiwan and was our major source for non-indigenous defense equipment. It is important to note that while there was no mandatory guarantee made by the U.S to defend Taiwan under the TRA, they (and a great many others) chose to come to our aid anyway.

Despite the establishment of more favorable relations after the end of the Cold War with Jiang Zemin and Hu Jintao, Xi Jinping had been aggressively arguing for the return of Taiwan to the PRC. We had long suffered daily intrusions into our air defense identification zone and coercive economic and diplomacy offensives from across the strait. Beijing has used its military to attack us and occupy part of our Nation. We now sit in the dragon's mouth, and it's jaws are slowly closing.

Strategic Objectives

There has been and will only ever be one goal: Taiwan is to remain a free and independent nation. We will continue take all necessary measures to secure Taiwan and its people from Beijing and resist the enemies. China cannot be allowed to dictate the politics of our country.

Country Briefing - The Republic of China

Political Briefing

Introduction

Since 1949 the Republic of China (ROC) also known as Taiwan has been in a constant struggle against the People's Republic of China (PRC). Our population, GDP, and military capabilities are now far behind that of a resurgent PRC and only 12 minor UN members recognize us instead of the PRC. Officially we do not claim to be an independent country, rather a continuation of the ROC, claiming the whole Chinese mainland. Unofficially however we have long seen the writing on the wall and have formed a unique Taiwanese identity.

The US-Taiwanese relationship is based on the Taiwan Relations Act (TRA). The treaty allows the U.S to supply arms to Taiwan and was our major source for non-indigenous defense equipment. It is important to note that while there was no mandatory guarantee made by the U.S to defend Taiwan under the TRA, they (and a great many others) chose to come to our aid anyway.

Despite the establishment of more favorable relations after the end of the Cold War with Jiang Zemin and Hu Jintao, Xi Jinping had been aggressively arguing for the return of Taiwan to the PRC. We had long suffered daily intrusions into our air defense identification zone and coercive economic and diplomacy offensives from across the strait. Beijing has used its military to attack us and occupy part of our Nation. We now sit in the dragon's mouth, and it's jaws are slowly closing.

Strategic Objectives

There has been and will only ever be one goal: Taiwan is to remain a free and independent nation. We will continue take all necessary measures to secure Taiwan and its people from Beijing and resist the enemies. China cannot be allowed to dictate the politics of our country.

